KDLA’s mission

The mission of KDLA is to support and promote access to library services and to ensure that documentation of government activities is created, preserved, and made available for public use.
KDLA Workforce and Adult Services Consultant

• Provide support and training opportunities for public library staff that serve adults 18 and up

• Foster connections between public library staff and state and local workforce agencies and other agencies that serve adults (e.g. Cooperative Extension, Kentucky Career Centers, and Veterans organizations)

• Coordinate training opportunities (webinars, in-person meetings) for public library staff
IMLS Grants to States

• Through the Grants to States program, the Institute of Museum and Library Services supports statewide library initiatives and competitive grants in the United States and its territories. KDLA and other state libraries receive funding each year according to a population-based formula, and each agency carries out programs based on a five-year plan approved by IMLS. KDLA’s five-year plan aligns with the priorities of the Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA).

Workforce Development at the Lexington Public Library

• During the pandemic, many Lexingtonians became dislocated from their jobs and careers

• Executive Director, Heather Dieffenbach sought to position the Library to effectively assist job seekers in career pivots by creating a Education Department.

• The Library’s Education Department is headed by Clarissa Thomas and she oversees workforce development as well as early education and school-age programming.
What is Workforce Development?

Workforce Development

“...has come to describe a relatively wide range of activities, policies and programs employed by geographies to create, sustain and retain a viable workforce that can support current and future business and industry.”

Lyn E. Haralson, What is Workforce Development? Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, April 1, 2010
Workforce Development: An Individualized Approach

“Educational institutions and public and private social service providers, for example, approach workforce development and develop programs from the perspective of the sustainable economic security of the individual.”

Haralson, id.
Workforce Development and the Role of Training and Education

“The premise behind “individual centric” workforce development programs is that individuals will not be able to make substantive contributions to their respective societies without access to training and education.”

Haralson, id.
Workforce Development and Social Supports

Organizations serving individuals recognize that in most instances meeting the basic needs of an individual through social safety nets is a necessary component to sustainable economic security.

Therefore, workforce development from this perspective is defined as a combination of social services, community supports, job training and education that positions an individual for success in the workforce.”
